Dear Professor Tremblay,

I just wanted to take a minute to write you concerning Nick Muller. I am enrolled in his Econ 201 class and I am thoroughly enjoying it. I have worked on campus for 23 years and have just recently started back to school to earn a degree in business. It really is interesting being back in the classroom after 30 years.

Mr Muller is doing a fine job in keeping what is normally a dull subject stimulating. He seems to have a talent for illustration. In some of the other classes I've taken I notice that the teacher doesn't mind losing the students attention but not so with Mr. Muller. He seems to genuinely care that the students get the salient points.

I know I could have waited for the evaluation to come around but I know that sometimes these are taken with a 'grain of salt' because of their perfunctory nature.

Thank You
